Identifying a Jack Style

1. How do you operate your jacks? With a hand-held remote control, a pump handle, or crank handle?
  - a. If the answer is hand-held remote control, you have either the Convertible Jack with a Powerhead or the Electric Jack (Continue to Question 2)
  - b. If the answer is pump handle you have the Hydraulic Jack. Please note this jack is discontinued but if you have questions or need parts contact our customer service department to check for availability
  - c. If the answer is crank handle, then you have either the Convertible Jack with Manual Gearbox, Four Corner Mechanical Jack, or Tripod Jack (Continue to Question 3)

2. Hand Held Remote Control – Is there a blue Rieco-Titan label on the jack outer tube near the top of the jack that reads “2000#”, underneath the powerhead?

YES

You have a Convertible Jack with Powerhead

NO

You have an Electric Jack

3. If you use a crank handle, is your jack mounted on the camper corner or underneath the camper?

Other Helpful Information

The Convertible Jack with Powerhead and Electric Jack can be easily confused. The 2500# powerhead is used on both Electric jacks and Convertible Jacks that have been converted from “mechanical” to “electric”. Another way to determine which one you have is to look at the footplate. If it is welded then it’s Convertible and if it is attached with a bolt underneath then it is Electric.

Both the Four-Corner Mechanical Jacks and Convertible Jacks, can be upgraded to electric. However, there are two different kits - one for each type of jack.
